Safe-Ride provides transportation back to campus

by Jennifer Evans, staff writer

In response to concerns from the Salisbury campus and community about student drinking and driving, the SSU Student Government Association and the appropriations board have introduced a new program called Safe-Ride.

This program offers students a free shuttle bus service Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays from 10 p.m. to 2 a.m..

To use the service, students simply call the Safe-Ride number, 548-4757, and the shuttle will pick them up anywhere within a three mile radius of the school.

The shuttle will bring students back to the SSU campus only, including the International House and the Power Professional parking lot.

SGA Senator Joe Herman hopes that this program will not only help cut down on student drinking and driving, but also help relieve problems of drunk and/or disorderly students walking through the community.

Herman spent most of his winter term getting the project under way with the help of Dean of Students Carol Williamson and Richard Yobst, director of administrative services.

From 10 p.m. to midnight the phone line is answered in the SGA office. Because the University Center closes at midnight, public safety donated the use of their switchboard and calls after 12 are answered by a student in their office.

Walkie-talkies were also provided so that the shuttle can recheck addresses and learn of other pickups while they are out. This also helps insure that students will not have to wait a long time for the shuttle to pick them up.

The Safe-Ride staff consists of 10 students, four women and six men, and all are students.

There is always a driver and a shotgun rider so that the driver only has to worry about driving, and the shotgun rider is there for safety reasons.

In order to insure safety for both drivers and passengers, a few rules have been created. No food or drink is allowed on the shuttle to cut down on litter. The student who makes the call to Safe-Ride must give their last name in case there is an emergency. And all passengers must show their SSU ID and give their first name only for liability purposes.

The program is on a trial basis, and if there is a lack of use, or there is misuse of the service, the program will be discontinued. Herman hopes that students realize that this is a safe and easy way to get back to campus after drinking. And if the program is successful, it may be extended to provide full shuttle service to both on and off campus students as well.

Ground breaking planned for Route 13 underpass

by MaryBeth Vanston, staff writer

Ground breaking as early as May 1994 is planned for the underpass that will be built under Route 13.

The blue prints and the schematic drawings for the underpass are complete, and the construction documents are currently under design.

The ramp descending to the underpass will begin at the entrance to Maggs Gym; the walkway will then continue under Rt. 13, and there will be stairs at the opposite side of the highway so students may have access to Roy Rogers or perhaps McDonalds.

The underpass will end at Bateman Street, which is the service road behind Roy Rogers. Here, at Bateman Street, there will be another ramp like that at the Maggs entrance. Both the ramps and the underpass will be handicapped accessible. The underpass itself will be 10 feet wide and 10 feet high.

Joseph Gilbert, vice

The underpass will be built under Route 13 at this location.

president of administration, said that the underpass would be safe for students. He stated that the underpass will be extremely well lit at all times, and will also be equipped with motion detectors that will activate closed circuit cameras.

That way, if a student should be using the underpass late at night, or if someone is in the underpass who should not be, the cameras will be activated. This will enable Public Safety to view the underpass and its occupants, and should there be any concern or problem, Public Safety can act immediately.

According to Gilbert, the primary reason for constructing the underpass is the large numbers of students that have to cross Rt. 13 on a daily basis. These include commuting students and those who must travel to east campus for team sports, intramurals or classes at the Power Professional building.

Soccer player Dave Jackson said, "[The underpass] will make it more convenient for the team because you won't have to worry about all the traffic when you're going to practice, especially when you're in a hurry."

Gilbert said that he hopes the underpass will not only help pedestrians, but that it will also help to clear up the busy intersection for vehicles.

The target for completion of the underpass is the 1994 Fall semester. Gilbert said that this date is improbable. He explained that on each side of the highway the state sets aside easements for electric, gas and telephone lines, which will all need to be re-routed for the underpass.

The Maryland State Highway Institution will build the underpass, but their work may be slowed should there be any long durations of rain or inclement weather during the planned construction period.

The estimated cost of the underpass is $1.5-1.9 million, half of which will be funded by the state, and half by the University.

Center for Conflict Resolution awarded $3,300

by Garrett McGlothlin, staff writer

Salisbury State's Center for Conflict Resolution was recently awarded a grant of $3,300 by the Peace Development Fund of Amherst, Mass., in appreciation for its outstanding community service in teaching nonviolence.

"Our underlying aim is to change the culture which tends towards violent resolution of quarrels to one that seeks nonviolence as a way of life," according to the Center's Statement of Purpose.

The program is headed by SSU biology instructor and peace worker Joan Maloof. Student interns make up the staff and take the message into local area schools.

Salisbury State students who are anxious to do peace work are trained by the Center for Conflict Resolution (CCR), then are given the opportunity to teach classes in local K-12 schools.

In the classroom, the guest teachers introduce potential conflict situations to students and teach them some basic principles of nonviolent conflict resolution.

SSU student Sherry Grimes has taught nonviolence to Salisbury school children for the last two semesters. "First," said Grimes, "we teach them to listen to each other, second to explain how each feels without casting blame, third to ask what the problem is and fourth to think of a solution together."

In essence, they stop fighting because they are asked to work together.

Currently the center has 11 interns preparing for a new semester of working with teachers and students in 20 first grade classes at Chipman Elementary School.

SSU's peace train heads out into the community to teach children about nonviolent conflict resolution.

peace-teacher Matthew Elburn said, "I want to work with kids because I see a lot of ignorance in people my own age. I thought it would be good to teach them about tolerance and cooperation early in their lives."

Currently, the Center operates under two grants, one from the Community Foundation of the Eastern Shore, the other from the PTA of Chipman Elementary.

"There has been so much demand for conflict resolution [from local schools] we've had to say no."

A full time position being opened next year will expand the Center's scope.

Plans for the Center's future include opening a center for conflict mediation on campus. Students will be able to receive mediation for conflicts with other members of the University or the community.

This position will be funded cooperatively between SSU and the Wicomico County School Board.

With the $3,300 award from the Peace Development Fund, CCR will expand to serve Pemberton Elementary School starting next fall.

Discussing the need for nonviolent conflict resolution teaching, Maloof said that in the absence of the values of community and extended family, the schools are an important place to teach nonviolence.

The children have responded favorably to the program.

In evaluations of the Center's efforts, three-fourths of students surveyed last semester said they have used the skills they learned to settle disputes. Half of them said that the skills had helped them.

The teachers have also incorporated nonviolence into their own teaching, according to Grimes.

The Center for Conflict Resolution holds meetings every Thursday at 4 pm in Fulton Hall, room 121.

Cops: Nanticoke Hall's "Attic Man"

by Janet Scouten, staff writer

Bad boys, bad boys,
Whatcha gonna do?
Whatcha gonna do when They come for you?

The men and women of law enforcement are alive and well at Salisbury State University, working hard to protect the campus from dangers lurking around every corner.

Three years ago, this month, a strange figure known only as "Attic Man" haunted the third floor residents of Nanticoke Hall.

According to the March 19, 1991 issue of the Flyer, "sitting in one of the third floor rooms, one of the girls looked up and noticed a white male poking his head out the room's ceiling tile. She told her friend, 'There is a man-in our room.' The residents immediately left and called Public Safety."

On Feb. 23 at 12:20 pm, the day after the first Attic Man incident, another resident looked up and saw that one of the ceiling tiles in her room was moving. She shouted and called Public Safety.

There were several reports of noises in the attic and of moved ceiling tiles during the time period between Feb. 27 and March 18, 1991. Each time that Public Safety was called, an officer checked the attic and always found it empty.

According to Jim Phillips, director of Public Safety, the intruder "could have climbed up into the [suspended] ceiling from the hall or another room" and crawled around above the third floor dorm rooms.

These guys don't mess around.

The incident report described the intruder as a white male, age 18 to 20, clean shaven, with dark eyes, small nose and spiked styled hair.

The resident also said that the intruder had a small gold earring in his left ear and had thin arms.

This strange, thin armed man was never caught.

Phillips explained that after about three weeks of reports from Nanticoke residents concerning noises in the attic and tiles moved in the suspended ceiling, a video camera and motion detector were installed in the attic. The camera never captured the intruder on film.

"Whoever the intruder was knew he was going to get caught," said Phillips.

Attic Man was never seen again.

To prevent the possibility of anyone ever entering the students' rooms again from the attic, the suspended ceiling was replaced with dry wall ceiling during the summer of 1991.

However, the Attic Man incident was not the first time SSU's Public Safety had to deal with someone crawling around above a suspended ceiling.

According to Phillips, about seven or eight years ago, a student accessed the Ruth Powell Dining Hall (continued on page 3)

Cops: Nanticoke Hall's "Attic Man" and other adventures

through the hatch in the building's roof.

At that time the roof hatch did not have a lock, as it does now. However, it was equipped with a silent alarm.

After the alarm went off, Public Safety officers arrived on the scene and proceeded to search the dining hall for an intruder, while the student crawled around above their heads.

Apparently, the suspended ceiling was not strong enough to support the weight of the student, and he came crashing down onto the ground directly in front of the officers.

The student was not injured.

Another incident involving the dining hall took place over 20 years ago in the early 1970's.

"We got a call one night," said Phillips, "reporting that there was a Volkswagen Beetle in the dining hall lobby."

Apparently, a group of students removed the center bar from the double door entrance of the dining hall and carried the car inside.

The entrance was "just wide enough for the bug to fit through," said Phillips.

A Public Safety officer and several students carried the car out of the dining hall and drove it down the steps.

But the men and women of Public Safety don't just deal with the hardened criminals found on SSU's campus, they also deal with ducks.

About six years ago, a mother duck made her nest on one of the hills adjacent to Red Square. After the eggs hatched, the mother duck and her new ducklings made a little excursion around campus.

Someone concerned about the well-being of the duck family called Public Safety.

By the time the officer reached the ducks, they had walked across the lawn in front of Holloway Hall and had reached Camden Avenue.

The officer then proceeded to stop traffic and the mother duck and ducklings safely crossed the street.

Quack, quack, quack.

Spring break, here we come

by College Press Service

Tourism officials in Florida say that college students are expected to again flood the state for this year's spring break despite the murders of nine foreign tourists last year.

The tourist killings, which occurred across the state from an interstate reststop in the rural Panhandle to hundreds of miles away in Miami, caused many European tourists to think twice before traveling to the Sunshine State.

That apparently isn't the case for college students, at least in the eyes of state tourism officials.

"It won't have any bearing whatsoever. Young people I think that they are indestructible," said Suzanne Heddy, vice president of special events and tourism for the Daytona Beach Chamber of Commerce. "Spring break is such a phenomenon that it (crime) supersedes any type of consideration about not going."

She said most college students usually travel in groups of friends and "will not be in the same type of situations that would put them in jeopardy."

Last year officials estimate that Daytona Beach attracted about 200,000 students during the three-week spring break period in March and April, and Heddy said she expects about the same number to show up this year.

John Evans, with the Florida Tourism Association, said he thinks that college students face the same amount of danger in Florida as they do on their campuses, so crime in the state shouldn't be a factor in whether or not they will visit.

"College people are pretty sharp people," he said. "I think they are aware that they're in no greater danger in Florida than where their campuses are located. I doubt seriously what we've gone through will affect spring break, unless there is another attack on a visitor."

He said most college students stay in a "pretty well defined" area where "the party takes place."

"I don't think they're going to be getting in areas where they will be in danger," Evans said. "They're in more danger of a pretty severe sunburn or hangover than being mugged."

Florida remains the No. 1 spring break destination for college students on spring break," said Stuart Himmelfarb, vice president of Roper Starch Worldwide, which conducts surveys for Roper College Track, a New York-based marketing firm.

In April 1993 Roper College Track surveyed 1,200 full-time undergraduate students, and 32 percent of the respondents said they had taken a vacation during spring break, with 29 percent traveling in the United States. Of those students who stayed in the country, Florida was the No. 1 destination, Himmelfarb said.

He said lack of money, and not crime, could keep students away this year. But he didn't downplay Florida's crime. "There are a number of serious issues and concerns about Florida," he said. "If someone were to say to themselves, 'Should I go or not go?' this situation with crime could be the situation not to come."

OPINION

A Question of Waste?

During my past four semesters as an SSU student and Ruth Powell Dining Hall patron, I have witnessed several unpleasant exchanges between various students and the dining hall door monitors.

These exchanges all seem to originate over an attempt by a student to remove food from the premises, who is then reprimanded by the door monitor. Often these little exchanges can turn vicious, with harsh words being said by both the student and the dining services employee.

According to Carmen DiSylvestro, director of University Dining Services, students who attempt to remove food from the dining hall are supposed to be asked to finish their food before leaving. In actuality, this is not always the case. Let me recount a scenario in which I was involved in last semester:

I was leaving the dining hall, happily finishing my half-eaten apple, when I was approached by a blue-smocked Dining Services employee. She said:

"You can't take that out of here."

(Me) "But I'm almost finished with it. It's not as if I am going to give it away to someone."

(D.S.E.) "You have to throw it away."

(Me) "You mean you would rather me throw this apple away and waste it, rather than finish eating it?"

(D.S.E.) "Yes, you have to throw it away."

So, I gave the employee a nasty look and threw the apple away, determined to write a brilliant editorial exposing the dining hall as the monolithic food wasters that they truly are. However, something far more newsworthy came up, so I abandoned my vengeful quest to ruin the reputation of University Dining Services.

The flame was rekindled last week, however, as I witnessed a student eating an ice cream cone attempt to leave the dining hall. He was followed through the doorway by another such blue-smocked employee who began to accost him with harsh and humiliating words, including a mandate that he throw the ice cream cone away.

Perhaps my ears failed me, but I heard no request for that student to return to the dining hall and finish his meal. He was yelled at like a child, a scene which I found to be quite disturbing and inappropriate, especially considering that I had lived through such a humiliation myself.

Being concerned with giving a fair representation of the situation, I contacted Carmen DiSylvestro, who explained that the policy in such a situation would be for the employee to request for the student to simply finish the food before they leave. He also explained the reasoning behind this policy. To my surprise, the dining hall people were not evil food wasters. In fact, the main reason they don't let students finish that banana or ice cream cone was because of on-campus littering. Students throw apple cores, banana and orange peels and even ice cream cones onto campus property.

I understand that this is a problem. Littering creates more work for the student horticulture crew who are already working hard to keep our campus well groomed. These food items are biodegradable and will decompose fairly quickly, yet I sympathize with the inconvenience such littering creates for the campus community.

To some this entire issue may seem to be just an insignificant pet peeve. Consider however the larger picture that this scenario presents. The real problem here is one of responsibility, both on the part of the dining hall and the students. We pay for the food we eat and should be able to consume what we wish, including finishing those last few bites of apple or ice cream on the way to class or home. However, this freedom has been taken away from students due primarily to student irresponsibility in the form of littering, which amounts to abuse of privileges.

The spirit of the Olympics--the medal count

I had an argument with a friend the other day about the reasons that athletes go to the Olympics. Are they going purely for the honor of representing their country and to participate? Or are they going to "bring home the gold" and achieve their own selfish goals?

Is the man who finishes 25th in speed skating but sets a personal record angry at himself for a poor performance? No. I doubt that he remotely had the goal of winning a gold medal, unless his perception was so altered by arrogance that he thought he had a chance.

It is more likely that this man was there just to compete. He may have gotten to skate with one of his idols and cheer for his countrymen.

In post-event interviews, many athletes admitted that they didn't expect to win. Some competitors taking this statement had won medals, others hadn't. They may have been trying to seem noble in defeat, or they could have been sincere.

On the other hand, we have athletes like Tonya Harding, who declare weeks in advance that they will win a gold medal. Her friends wanted her to win so much they tried to eliminate the opposition. Can we blame them?

We've come to a point where it doesn't matter where you finish, unless you're number one. It is a quality that we may not want to pass on to the next generation. Do whatever it takes to win, and claim you had no knowledge of it. Sure, someone may get crippled, but hey, I got the medal.

It's our own fault. Or maybe CBS's fault. They start off giving all these touching stories about the Olympic spirit. There were guys who came from Bosnia just to compete (or maybe it was a way out). We learned about Dan Jansen's past (again), and luckily he won. We also found out about other people recovering from injury, recovering from drugs, recovering from everything. What follows these amazing stories of determination and spirit -- Greg Gumbel says, "After this break, the medal count." That's a good way to ruin an Olympic moment.

The medal count is in direct opposition to everything the Olympics stand for: peace, good spirit, friendly competition. The medal count brings out the worst in human nature: greed. As a result, we cheer when a skater falls or a skier wipes out. We revel in pleasure due to their agony. And we hate entire countries because they beat us in hockey or luge. (Well, maybe not luge.)

If we look for the true Olympians, we'll see the best of humanity--the type of guy who gives his governmental Olympic cash reward to aid Sarajevo. His name is Johann Olav Koss.

And we'll see Katarina Witt, the German skater who went without a chance of winning. She knew it, the reporters knew it, and the fans knew it. She didn't try the most difficult jumps, the ones necessary to medal. So why did she go? Living behind the Iron Curtain for years, her parents never saw her skate at the Olympics. This year they did. She also got to skate for a Unified Germany. Freedom is a thing to be appreciated, she reminded us. She also went so that we would not forget Sarajevo, the city where she skated her first Olympic competition. They're without a lot of freedoms, including the freedom to live without fear of mortar shelling. On Thursday when two skaters collided during practice, who was the first person over to help? Katarina Witt. Most of all, she was there to have fun. Because of that, she was the one I was rooting for during the competition, not Ms. Harding or Kerrigan. So what if I'm not being patriotic--I'm at least being human.

With an Olympic-sized let-down,

Nations getting closer

by Yoav Wachsman, editorial columnist

One of the most important questions that hung like a cloud over Capitol Hill last year is what effect NAFTA would have on our economy.

A confused and baffled American audience sat in front of their tubes to listen to the Vice President predict over 300,000 new jobs in the new open market, countered by the Perot arguing that jobs are going to be sucked out of the heart of the U.S.

Both men were right. Initially some companies are going to load their vans and rush to the southern border. But many economists would argue that the new market will not only create new jobs in the U.S. but will also lower the prices of goods, thus bettering the life of the average American consumer.

Besides, even if Perot blew enough steam over NAFTA to build a sauna, it couldn't stop the emergence of free trade. Granted, Congress could have voted against the agreement, but they still wouldn't be able to stop the borders from opening.

In actuality, while top world diplomats negotiate who will fly fighters over the Bosnian sky, businesses magnates are changing the shape of the world behind closed doors.

The aristocracy of the business world will never let an obstacle such as Congress voting against NAFTA stand in the way of progress. Perot has a better chance of stopping a train by leaping underneath its wheels than to stop world trade.

World trade allows for an array of benefits that multinational companies are craving to sink their teeth into. Lack of borders means that each company can get the source for its product or services from the cheapest seller. It also means that companies will be free to subcontract other companies from all corners of the international market in an attempt to achieve optimal efficiency.

To the international costumer, a world-wide market spells two things: quality and low prices. If there aren't any economic boundaries, and geographic boundaries can be penetrated by speedy transportation, then each country or region will benefit from specializing in a number of products.

This holds true because it is relatively cheaper to produce certain kinds of commodities in certain regions and because mass production of one product will drive down its marginal cost—the cost to produce an additional unit of the product. Specialization, in turn, leads to efficiency and efficiency is the pavement for quality.

Once the economic boundaries of the world crumble down, then companies will have to engage in a rat race to satisfy their customers. Such a competition would lower prices and make our wallets a lot thicker.

Despite the clear benefits of a free market, many in the U.S. still oppose NAFTA because it will create a decline of jobs in the heart of America. Opponents of free trade suggest that the lower stipends and the lax pollution regulation south of the border will entice more companies to build their industries there.

The jobs, however, are going to mushroom north of the border despite the fact that the Mexicans can produce a product for less. When all the cards are on the table, what is going to make the difference is where the educated people are. For one thing, owners may be able to get away with paying less to Mexican workers, but they may not be the most productive.

Sooner or later, Mexican workers will demand more bread for their labor and then the labor in Mexico won't be inexpensive anymore. Companies will then head for the countries that can offer them the best productivity per worker, so we had better invest some money back into our education system.

Many of the blue-collar jobs are gone. Now jobs involve advertisement, marketing, transportation and designing computer programs with which to run the company.

The countries who have superior education systems will have better troops with which to win the war for jobs. And that is what Al Gore meant when he said that more jobs for the Mexicans would mean more jobs for us.

The Green Piece: Just bag it

by Kate Spinner

Plastic bags are all around us. We use them to carry groceries, clothes and trash. Recently, some plastic companies have been producing so-called "biodegradable" or "degradable" bags in order to promote sales.

The fact is that there is no such thing as biodegradable plastic, it is a false marketing scam that has been denounced by environmental organizations as well as scientists.

Biodegradable is defined in Webster's dictionary as something that is "easily decomposing through the action of bacteria or by other biological means."

The plastic bags decompose somewhat, but not entirely. These biodegradable plastics are composed of 94 percent tiny plastic molecules that are mixed with 6 percent of some sort of natural substance, like cornstarch.

In order for the plastic to be strong enough for general use, about 10 percent more plastic must be used than in an average plastic bag. This compensates for the weak plastic to cornstarch binds. Actually, a regular plastic bag is a better environmental choice.

Although the cornstarch biodegrades naturally, all the little plastic particles are left behind in the form of plastic dust. Bacteria and wildlife, in turn, consume the harmful plastic and pass it along through the food chain.

So don't be fooled by "degradable" or "biodegradable" plastics. Just use a regular plastic bag. Or better yet, use a lightweight string bag that can be used to carry groceries as well as clothes. When it comes time to take out the trash try to reuse old paper or plastic grocery bags.

Always looking for adventure, I had the opportunity to cruise on the Safe-Ride shuttle last Friday with driver Kevin Yanulavich and shotgun rider Leo Vieira. Although only four calls were made to the program, things were pretty busy.

The first call of the evening came in around 12:30, and Yanulavich and Vieira were ready to roll. At the first stop we found a happy and amorous couple eager to return to an empty dorm room on campus.

Upon reaching the address, this couple was already outside waiting, and were glad to ride in a warm van rather than walking in the cold. When asked what they thought of the service, the young man answered, "It's too damn cold to walk, and if you can go home drunk without getting caught, it's great."

As we dropped them off at their dorm, another call came over the walkie talkie and we proceeded to pick up a single female passenger. Her ride back took a little longer than expected as Yanulavich stopped the van so that Vieira could help a lost dog on Smith Street find its way home.

On the way to the next call at Hazel Street, the van stopped to pick up two male students walking back towards the campus. After explaining that I wrote for the Flyer, not played for the Philadelphia Flyers as one of the partying students thought, they both said they appreciated the ride since it was so cold. But one of the guys suggested that an unmarked van be used.

At Hazel, student's standing around outside began to scatter thinking that the van was from public safety. Vieira reassured them that it was just students, and Yanulavich explained to one man what the service was all about.

Four girls who had made the call boarded, and, what a coincidence, they already knew the two guys who had been picked up. Everyone was very happy and very loud upon realizing this and things went smoothly on the trip back.

Unfortunately, two of the girls, one who would definitely not have been able to make it safely back to the campus by herself, and another who seemed to be having difficulties getting into the van, (causing her to laugh ALL the way back to campus) decided that they would use each other for walking support after being dropped off at their dorm. Both quickly fell on top of each other, and Vieira was nice enough to pick them up off of the ground and place them in the care of the other two girls with them.

The last call came at 1:50 a.m., just meeting the 2 a.m. deadline. Two girls needed a ride when the guy who was driving them around tried to start a fight with everyone at a party. Yanulavich and Vieira quickly came to their rescue.

The girls actually had called public safety for a ride not realizing that there was a Safe-Ride program, and their call was transferred to the shuttle service. They were glad that the service was available and suggested that it should run all night, not just until 2 a.m.

The only complaints were from Vieira who said that Yanulavich did not know how to run the heater correctly. And that he "hopes that no one will end up getting sick because shotgun would have to help clean that up."

If you are going to ride, remember these things: in order to get picked up call 548-4757, have your SSU ID, try and stay conscious, and don't ask to go to Taco Bell because they just can't take you there!

ODK Leadership society honors Bossermans

by Stephanie Havenner, guest writer

The Omicron Delta Kappa leadership Honor Society honored C. Phillip Bosserman, professor of sociology, and Carol Bosserman, vice-president of academic affairs, during a reception Thursday, Feb. 17 in the University Center lounge for their long-standing support of ODK.

Phillip Bosserman was one of the three chapter members of the Salisbury Circle of ODK, which was established in 1976. Before coming to Salisbury, he received his membership in ODK as a professor at the University of South Florida in 1975. His former student at the University of South Florida initiated the Salisbury Circle of ODK.

Carol Bosserman and daughter Beth were initiated in 1980 into the Salisbury Circle of ODK. In the National Newsletter, the Bosserman family was recognized for belonging to the same circle of ODK.

Phillip Bosserman will be leaving Salisbury State University to teach sociology and develop an intercultural studies program at the Hiroshima Women's University in Japan. Although their semester does not begin until April 1, he will leave here early to learn Japanese in Kyoto, Japan, the ancient imperial capital.

Carol Bosserman will stay in Salisbury until she retires next spring, and will join her husband full-time next May. She plans to work with students in Japan to improve their English verbal skills because most are only taught how to write the language.

The Omicron Delta Kappa Leadership Honor Society recognizes those students with outstanding leadership and academic abilities. The Salisbury Circle of ODK takes nominations for inductions from faculty and student leaders in late February. The students are tapped in March and given the opportunity to join.

And now, another real-life fairy tale.

A Love Story

Once upon a time, there lived two praying mantises: Morris and Mimi Mantis. They met one warm day on a branch high up in an oak tree and were immediately drawn to each other. After a long and happy courtship they decided to mate. When they were done Morris gazed lovingly into Mimi's eyes. This was the happiest moment of his young life. "Oh Mimi!", he cooed, "Soon we will be blessed with beautiful and precious little children!"

She returned his gaze and smiled. "What do ya mean 'we'?" said Mimi. Then she ate him.

HEALTH NOTES

by: Joy Marowski and Linda Lombardi

Here are some stats that will turn your head....

- * 17 percent of college men report that they use condoms correctly and consistently
- * 28 percent of college women report the same
- * 43 percent of women will have been pregnant at least once by the time they turn 20
- * Only 17 percent of girls say they planned their first sexual experience
- * 15-20 percent of college students say that they are often too drunk to use birth control
- * There are over 20 different STDs (sexually transmitted diseases)
- * One in 10 students will acquire an STD
- * One unplanned pregnancy is diagnosed each week in SSU's Health Center
- * Two-three STDs a week are also diagnosed (up to 10 ongoing cases are treated weekly)
- * Nine out of 10 cases occur because the couple is under the influence and fails to use a condom or other form of protection

At SSU, the Top Three STDs are....

- 1) HPV- human papilloma virus (genital warts)
  - Two-three new cases a week are diagnosed in the Health Center
  - ongoing cases are seen on a daily basis
  - incubation periods can be up to 20 months
- 2) Chlamydia
  - it is the most common STD in the United States
  - it often goes untreated because 80% of women show no symptoms (and don't find out their partners do)
- 3) Herpes
  - One in six adults has genital herpes
  - Four in five have orofacial herpes
  - Herpes Simplex I (fever blisters) and Herpes Simplex II are both transmitted from site of infection to site of contact

And the new kid on the block is Hepatitis B, * which can be transmitted through towels, toothbrushes, razors, even earrings!
* this is the only vaccine-preventable STD (vaccines are recommended for 18-22 year olds)

So, why does SSU have a Top Three List?
Because....

- 1) We don't think STD's will happen to us.
- 2) We might not know we have an STD.
- 3) We get comfortable in our relationships and think (wrongly!) that protection isn't necessary.
- 4) We change sexual decisions often when we are under the influence.

SPORTS Salisbury State snows Frostburg, 115-100

by Kevin Bradford, guest writer

The Salisbury State University men's basketball team doesn't have much of a chance this year of making a third appearance in the last four years in the NCAA tournament.

However, the Sea Gulls (13-11) got sweet revenge Thursday night in a spoiler role, knocking off cross-state rival Frostburg State 115-100 before a crowd of 755 at the Maggs Center. SSU has won eight of its last nine games after a slow 5-10 start.

The Bobcats (15-8) are shooting for an NCAA berth, but the Gulls put a big damper on FSU's tourney hopes. FSU was seeded sixth in the Atlantic Region, which sends the top five seeded region teams to the NCAA tourney.

SSU junior forward Kyle Jefferson had a monster night with a career-high 35 points. Jefferson, who also had 7 rebounds and four steals, shot 10 for 13 from the field and 14 of 15 from the foul line.

"I hope we knocked them out of the NCAA's," said Jefferson. "It feels good to beat them twice in one year. If we played like this from the get go, we'd probably get in the tournament."

SSU, who beat the Bobcats 88-80 on January 29, have won eight of its last nine against FSU since the 1990-91 season. Ironically, the Gulls' loss last year to FSU virtually eliminated SSU from the NCAA tourney.

They knocked us out last year, but there's no animosity between us," said Ward Lambert. "We're a good team now, but it took too long to get there. We've finally won some games at home."

Senior guard Dameon Ross ended his home finale in style with 32 points, eight rebounds, six steals, and five assists. Ross is averaging 28.1 points over the last 12 games, pushing SSU to eight victories.

SSU was ahead 35-28 with 6:00 left in the first half. But then freshman guard John DeRichie came off the bench blazing, and banged in four of five three-pointers to accelerate the Gulls on a 25-12 spurt to close the half with a comfortable 60-40 lead. DeRichie finished with 12 points in 16 minutes.

"He's picked us up a couple of times this year," said Lambert of DeRichie. "He's a shooter."

The Gulls nailed a school record 42 free throws, and ended up shooting 89 percent from the charity stripe with 47 attempts.

"It's not a storybook ending," said senior guard Jon Evans. "We're not going to the NCAA tournament, but it was a good win in front of a good crowd."

"We couldn't have ended it any better," said senior guard Tom Wolfe, who scored 17 points and handed out 7 assists in his final home game.

"They had a chance to go for the NCAA's, but hopefully we spoiled that. I wish we'd played this well earlier in the season, but you don't always have that luxury."

Tom Wolfe scores 17 in final home game

by Mike Beardslee, Staff Writer

All basketball teams have point guards; some good, and some bad. However, few Division III teams have a point guard who understands the game as well as Tom Wolfe, senior co-captain and main ballhandler for the Salisbury State men's basketball team.

Wolfe's father was once the coach of the Frostburg State men's basketball program, and so Wolfe was introduced to the game at an early age.

"He played a big role in my development [as a basketball player]. He never pressured me, but he was always encouraging."

Wolfe says that his father helped him see the game, "Not just as a ballplayer, but also from the coach's perspective. The point has to be a leader. He has to be an extension of the coach on the floor."

Wolfe had a somewhat inauspicious beginning as a member of the men's basketball team. He wasn't recruited here for any sport, and in the fall of his freshman year, in '90, he played tennis for SSU. When the fall season ended, he decided to try out for the basketball team, and he made the team as the 15th man, filling the final roster spot.

Things changed drastically in his freshman season, however. Vince Ross and Reggie Butler, the two players who played the point most of the time, quit the team with 8 games remaining in the season. Ward Lambert, the men's basketball coach, was left with no choice but to play his two freshman point guards. Jon Evans started one game, and then Wolfe started the last 7.

Wolfe didn't start as a sophomore, but saw time as a backup to Bret Grebowsky. That was the year that the Gulls went 28-2, and went to the final 8 in the Division III

NCAA tournament.

Wolfe says that team was something special. "It was a very close knit group of guys. There was a lot of camaraderie."

SSU was beaten by Jersey-City State in the tournament, but Wolfe says that playing in those games is the highlight of his career. "It was the biggest rush. It's a feeling I'll never forget. Just coming out for warmups got the adrenalin flowing. Everybody tries to lift their game because there's so much riding on it."

Wolfe finally earned the starting role for good as a junior, when he took over the point when Grebowsky moved over to the 2-guard. He started 18 games, and averaged 7.7 points, 5.7 assists, and had 52 steals.

This season Wolfe had a slow start, missing the first four games due to a torn lateral meniscus. He received arthroscopic surgery for the injury, and made a swift comeback. He is currently averaging 10.7 points, 7.2 assists, and is second on the team in steals with 42. He is also second in three-point field goals made.

Wolfe says that he is happy with the way the team is playing now, as they have won 8 of their last 9 games. "We're more relaxed now than earlier in the season." He also sees room for improvement, however. "There's a lot of new players, and team unity is not what it should be."

Wolfe played his final home game with style, scoring 17 points on 57% shooting, including a 6 for 6 performance from the foul line. He also dished out 7 (continued on page 14)

Kristi Kauffman, freshman phenom

by Josh LeBaron, Staff Writer

For someone who did not expect to play much this season, Kristi Kauffman has really gained some notoriety among coaches and opponents alike.

Kauffman, a 5-8 freshman guard from Sinking Springs, Pennsylvania, has played exceptionally well for SSU in her first season.

Kauffman was recently awarded ECAC Rookie-of-the-Week honors after scoring 57 points and hauling down 27 rebounds in a three game span. After scoring 17 points in a loss to Goucher and 13 points in a loss to Virginia Wesleyan, Kauffman followed up with a career best 27 point performance in a

76-61 loss to Frostburg State. Kauffman's reaction to the award? "I was pleased. I'm happy with the way I've been playing."

Burroughs, tennis coach, plans to retire

by Joe Herman, staff writer

For the men's Salisbury State tennis team, the 1994 season will mark the end of an era. After 20 years and a remarkable 276-108 career record, head coach Dean Burroughs has announced that he will retire at the conclusion of this spring season.

When Burroughs first arrived at Salisbury in 1973, the tennis program was only a club sport that was eager for a leader to expand and solidify the program. Not only did Burroughs update tennis to varsity status, but since then the program has been among the region's best.

Through Burrough's hard work and dedication the Gulls have posted winning records 19 out of the last 20 seasons and have won over 70 percent of all matches played. Additionally Salisbury State has hosted the NCAA national championship tournament three times.

Under his direction, SSU has produced several all-America caliber players and nationally-ranked teams. The Sea Gulls have been selected for the NCAA national tournament six times under his leadership. He was also named Mid-Atlantic Professional Tennis Association (MAPTA)

Coach-of-the-Year twice and ESAC Coach-of-the-Year once.

Much of Burroughs success stems from his determination to improve upon the previous year. As a coach and P.E. teacher he has always stressed good physical condition and mental attitude. "Unlike many team sports, when players make a mistake in tennis they have to carry the entire load," said Burroughs. "Therefore, I stress that my players concentrate and remain under control mentally."

In 1992 Burroughs received the "Service of the Year" award from the United States Tennis Association. Burroughs is also an active member of the Mid-Atlantic Professional Tennis Association and presently serves as president of the Delmarva Tennis Association. He has also served as the director of the respected Mid-Atlantic Tennis Association Film Library.

Presently, Salisbury State is attempting to separate the physical education department from the athletic department by redefining the tennis coaching position as "Tennis Director." The tennis director will be selected by the middle of May and will oversee both tennis facilities and coach both the men's and women's teams.

Although Burroughs will be retiring, he will still be the acting chair of SSU's physical education department and will teach at the University. "I will also work with the new director and give any needed input to make the transition as smooth as possible for the players," said Burroughs.

After the season ends Burroughs plans to spend more time with his family and his hobbies. "I'm looking forward to cycling, beekeeping, and I might even enjoy playing tennis a little more," added Burroughs.

Burroughs does hope that his team will finish strong by winning 10 or more matches this spring but doesn't want to place any extra pressure on the players because this is his last season. As he has in the past, Burroughs simply expects his players to improve upon last year's performance and to do their best.

As senior captain Brian Weist points out, Burroughs will be hard to replace. "He'll be missed, not just as a coach but as a friend," said Weist. "He's always been supportive on and off the court."

"These past 21 years have been very enjoyable and gratifying," said Burroughs. "To be honest its been a great experience and I probably will miss it, but right now this is the best decision for me and my familv."

games and she also tells us what we are doing bad and gives us ways to improve."

When she first came here in the fall, Kauffman did not expect to be playing as much as she has been. She said, "I was just hoping I would get a chance to play and help out the team however I could."

Kauffman has done more than help. She is second on the team in scoring with just under 15 points per game. She is also averaging 5 rebounds per game.

The team now has a deceiving 7-14 record; they have lost six of their games by a total of 12 points. "It seems like we play well against better teams, but we play worse against weaker teams," said Kauffman.

The women's team will lose only one player to graduation next year; point guard Jenny Shelley. Kauffman said, "I think were going to be good next year. We'll have much more experience from playing together and I think we'll win more games. Also, Amy Fenzel will be back next year and she is a big part of the team."

Kristi Kauffman is definitely a rising star in division III basketball. She's only a freshman and her abilities are going to make her a standout player for years to come.

They have now won 6 out of their last 7 games. Dameon Ross scored 28 points and SSU set a school record by hitting 18 3-point baskets. ### Women's Basketball

Last week the Salisbury State women's basketball team was unable to hold onto a 32-29 halftime lead as they fell to Cabrini College 66-53. Karen Lawrence scored 23 points, including five 3-point baskets to lead Cabrini. Ava Tasker netted 16 points and Kim Roth added 12 points for SSU. Last Thursday night the women's team closed out the season by dropping a one-point decision to the College of Notre Dame despite a career-high 31 points from Kim Roth. SSU, competing in the championships for the first time, fielded one of the smallest squads with only nine members. SSU finished 5-3 overall during the season and 3-1 against CAC opponents. The final standings in the CAC meet were Mary Washington (692), Goucher (346), Catholic (309), Marymount (283), St. Mary's (156), Salisbury State (111), York (68) and Gallaudet (54).

Ross cited by Sports Illustrated

Salisbury State University's senior basketball player Dameon Ross is this week's Sports Illustrated Small College Player-of-the-week. Ross, a 6'3" guard from Mitchellville, MD, earned the honor by scoring a career-high 46 points against Chowan last Saturday night. He is cited in the Feb. 28 issue, in the section entitled "Inside College Basketball." Ross has averaged 8.8 rebounds, 3.5 assists and 3.3 steals in addition to 32.5 points in the last four games. Ross' achievement is the third time that Sports Illustrated has selected a Sea Gull as its Player-of-the-Week. Former all-American Andre Foreman (1988-92) was honored twice by the magazine during his record-setting career.

Zeta Tau Alpha

Next time you see ZTA letters worn around campus, take notice! It could be one of our new initiates wearing them! Congratulations go out to all of our new sisters - Jennifer Buchanan, Kimberly Burgess, Linda Dalder, Susan Dillman, Jennifer Gregory, Tracy Hemstetter, Amy Joiner, Michele Jones, Christy La Manna, Becky Lambert, Michelle McDonnell, Kathy Schells and Kris Shartle. What's the saying girls... "Good Things Come to Those Who Wait"? Well, greek life and ZTA was your best college decision yet. You can't have any more fun in the town of Salisbury and you won't make better lasting memories. Speaking of this 105 CP wanted me to give you some memorable words of wisdom...

"Wella Faya not Sumia - ella le solo!". For all you Salisbury State girls, it's not meant to be translated, you had to be there. If you don't want to be in the "dark" about us any longer, Zeta Tau Alpha would love to include you in all of our secrets and fun. Come check us out on Wed., Feb. 23 at a RUSH information party from 7 - 10 pm in the University Center! Not just us, but all sororities will be there!

ZTA would also like to share with you our new EC officers. For starters, we have a new president, Dawn Zitzer, and she already has begun to do a great job! Others to note are Nicole Christos, VPI; Karen Hornig, VPI; Tara Murphy, Secretary; Melissa Gardner, Treasurer; Sheryl-Lynne Fink, Historian; Megan Viicino, Membership; Jen Corey, Ritual; and Jean Marie Williams, Pan. Del. Between the new officers and the new sisters, you can see ZTA has been going through a lot of spring semester changes! Share our excitement by calling Danielle at 546-5093 to get something up, and if it happens to be Monday, wish her a HAPPY BIRTHDAY!

A big thanks goes out to TKE for last Friday's "Grease" social. Your dancing and hula-hooping were the hits of the night. Don't believe us? You can see for yourself, it's all on tape. By the way, has anyone ever complimented you on your strong kitchen floor?

Finally, just a quick word to two other fraternities...to SAE we'd like to say congratulations to your new initiates. And to three particular Sig Tau's, just some friendly advice...lock your doors when you leave, and let us know when you're out of toilet paper.

Alpha Sigma Tau

Well, the most important issue at the moment is RUSH. To ZTA and Phi Mu - here's hopin' we all have a wonderful turnout... Good luck to this semester girls and have fun! Also, thanks to all the greek who bought from "Going Greek" last week. And we would like to congratulate the AI pledge class of SAE - your initiation social was a blast (but "Meat" - be careful what you spin!!!)

And for everybody out there, we'd appreciate you giving a big CONGRATS to our new exec. board: president, Kimme "Fight Starter" Koenig; vice-president, Tiffany "Rapunzel" Reynolds; treasurer, Kelly "Di.k - N - Nuts" Noel; rec. secretary, "Sunshine" Bryson; pledge dir., Jen "No time on her hands" Broschard; rush director, Jennifer "Gaaby"; philanthropy, Christine "RuPaul" Bendi; housing, Nicole "Pub sl _" Boucher; fundraiser, Lisa "Heartbreaker" Gavin; panhellenic delegate, Erica "much more time on her hands" Kreiner; and last but not least, asst. treasurer, Kelly "Annie" Flynn. WE LUV YOU GIRLS!

One last tidbit...we had a lot of fun during our "Mommy's Weekend" - horror stories of us as kids is quite interesting! On a final note AST's - don't forget those shooobss and remmalammes - GET READY TO SING!!!

Phi Mu

Rush is in full swing! It's been great getting to know you girls! Good luck this week.

We would like to thank Sig Tau for the "Back to School Bash"! Sorry about the mess guys. We had a great time. Let's do it again. This Fri. is "Founder's Day" for Phi Mu. We are 142 years old and we're STILL going strong. Jessica, these past few weeks have been interesting, aye?

You're doing an awesome job as Phi Mu president and Panhellenic president. Remember, your sisters are ALWAYS here when you need support. This semester has already shown what a strong knit group we are. Keep up the great work girls! Phi Mu is forever! If anyone would like to set up a social, please contact Jen at 546-4127 or Mary at 860-1893. Until next time...

Sigma Alpha Epsilon

As always, SAE is JUST DOING IT BETTER; and what more applicable way of showing this than by initiating 10 new brothers. A hearty PHI ALPHA goes out to our new pride of MD Sigma: Kevin (third times a charm) Evans, Garth (not Brooks) Wells, Brian (open up the pearly) Gates, Bill (I'd rather run than) Walker, Jeff (Granny Smith or is it Red Delicious) Apple, Phil (Polident) Loftis, Carlo (Carlito's Way) Ruggiero, Derek (Omnious Domnius) Reem, Joe (how can you see with your hat like that) Hannon, and Dan (I'm back) Dabrowski. Congratulations Brothers, but sit in the first row.

But of course, a special thanks to the ladies of AST for their distinguished presence at our Initiation party. You know, so, what can I say?

Three big Brother Heroes this week: good job John (silent but deadly ding) Groff, as well as PigPen (I can Rush) Dillow and Tom (Section 3, title 4, article 5) Long. Great job guys, keep it up! Also, a life saving thanks to Joe, who really did see Jeremy wiggle his toe.

And our parting shot... We are gearing up for our second annual Soft Touch Car Wash softball extravaganza, so if we have any future proposals for a game, we'll appease any TakErs. Get the picture (or is it pitcher?).

Tau Kappa Epsilon

As rush draws to a close we want to congratulate all the wise and eager young men who chose wisely and rushed TKE. It goes without saying that you made the best choice. From this point forward your lives will never be the same.

Our regional advisor recently visited and we sure hope he didn't get any incriminating evidence on us. Although he really hightailed out of here quick when the ship went down on Saturday, Nuss.

Friday, Feb. 18, 1994: The TKE "Movie/Tattoo club" lives again. Thanks to Aristotle, Raging Bullwinkle, the Infamous Chair that beat you-know-who, the Ranger, Peg-leg, the good singer with the sleepy coat, the men with the Caps, and one Final "put that on the banner" for all.

We are in a desperate search for some kind of organization to get up with for fun and frolics. Any organization will suffice, greek, or non-greek, we'll rise to the occasion and show what we got. To make a date call Jeff at 543-1492 and tell him what you need.

Greek Week is fast approaching and we are certainly looking forward to "3-peat" this year. But the best part of all is going to the annual (we hope) pig roast. Last year's was phenomenal and we hope this year's will be also. Let's not delay and get things rolling now.

Until next week, who really cares who wins the figure skating gold. They're both on minute number 13 (figure it out). Remember - we're not going anywhere until Gillis does the dishes! TKE (yea boyeeee!)

P.S. Special thanx to Chad "Boom-Boom" (old) for putting together this years "dream-team" for internurals. Look out!

Sigma Tau Gamma

The brothers of Sig Tau would like to ask one question: Shrimp? As the other fraternities have mentioned, Rush is here again. If posters are any indication of the personalities within a fraternity, everyone and their dog would join Sig Tau, but we invite you to check out all of the fraternities on campus.

We're not offering any free stuff, but you can probably find us at another interest meeting eating their pizza. Sig Tau holds informal rush meetings at Wilkins St. every Thursday, Friday, and Saturday nights. If you need a ride or want to talk to one of us, call Mike and Mark at 82188 or Beetle and Brad at 87741. So without having to confess afterwards, come rejoice and be a part of the second coming of Sigma Tau Gamma. No stupid sayings, just a bunch of good brothers. Quote of the week comes from our newest bunch of brothers from the 19th class: "It's all fun and games until someone gets hoofed." Peace.
